Contributors

Dr Michael Beverley is Senior Lecturer at the School of Psychology, Bangor University. He is a researcher at the Collaborative Institute for Education Research, Evidence and Impact (CIEREI). His research interests include evidence-based educational methods, precision teaching (PT), curriculum-based measurement (CBM), response to intervention (RtI), reading instruction, direct instruction (DI), effective instruction and instructional design, staff performance and fluency training.

Siân Brooks has been Secondary PGCE Tutor for modern foreign languages at UWTSO since 2014. She has also contributed to the Teach First, GTP, primary PGCE and the BAEd programmes. Before joining UWTSO she had a long teaching career as a French and Spanish teacher, most recently working as Curriculum Lead for French in Gower College, Swansea. Her research interests include triple/multilingual literacy and formative assessment using technology.

Professor Dan Davies was formerly Dean of the Cardiff School of Education and Social Policy at Cardiff Metropolitan University. He holds a BSc in physics, MA in design and technology education and PhD in the relationship between science and technology in the primary curriculum. He started his career as a primary teacher in south London, before working for the Design Council as an education officer and lecturing in science and technology education at Goldsmiths' College and Bath Spa University.

Dr Susan Davis is Senior Lecturer in primary education at the Cardiff School of Education and Social Policy, Cardiff Metropolitan University. Her research interests are in the Foundation Phase and pupil well-being.

Professor David Egan is Emeritus Professor of education in the Cardiff School of Education, Cardiff Metropolitan University. His research interests are in the broad field of educational policy and practice in Wales with particular interests in educational equity, professional learning and educational leadership. He is joint editor of the Wales Journal of Education.

Professor Richard P. Hastings is Professor of education, and Cerebra Chair of family research at CEDAR, University of Warwick. He is also Monash Warwick Professor, Centre for Developmental Psychiatry and Psychology, Monash University, Australia. His research focuses mainly on families of children with disabilities and special educational needs, mental health problems in children and adults with disabilities, and evidence-based educational interventions for children with special educational needs and disabilities.

Dr Kieran Hodgkin is Lecturer in education studies in the School of Education at Cardiff Metropolitan University. Kieran completed his PhD in July 2014. His research centred on pupils' expectations and experiences of the primary–secondary transition with a specific focus on physical education (PE).

Professor J. Carl Hughes is Professor of behavioural and educational research. He is Director of the Collaborative Institute for Education Research, Evidence and Impact (CIEREI). He holds a joint post in the Schools of Education and Psychology, Bangor University and has a strategic role for teacher education and regional education research capacity. His research interests are mainly focused on evidence-based approaches to improve outcomes and well-being for children through schools.

Ann Keane retired from her post as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education and Training in Wales in 2015. She is currently chair of the shadow board for the proposed National Academy for Educational Leadership in Wales and a non-executive director on the Board of the Welsh Government civil service.

Dr Helen Lewis leads the PGCE primary programme at the University of Wales Trinity Saint David. She is a former local authority mathematics adviser with expertise in developing young children's thinking skills. She is currently co-authoring a book on the topic.

Gail Parker is a senior lecturer and Foundation Phase lead at UWTSO since 2014, working with undergraduate and postgraduate trainees on the primary education programmes. Prior to this she was the training and support advisory teacher for the Early Years and Foundation Phase. She is also a reporting nursery inspector for Estyn.

Diane Thomas has been a lecturer in primary education at UWTSO since 2011, working with undergraduate and postgraduate trainees. Prior to this she held many roles in the primary school setting including the role of assistant head teacher and Welsh development leader, during which time she attained her NPQH.

Dr Emily Tyler is Lecturer in both the School of Education and the School of Psychology at Bangor University and a member of the recently formed Collaborative Institute for Education Research, Evidence and Impact (CIEREI). Her research interests include effective reading instruction for children with learning difficulties.

Dr Michael R. M. Ward is a lecturer in Applied Social Sciences at Swansea University. He is the author of the award-winning 2015 book From Labouring to Learning, Working-class Masculinities, Education and De-industrialization (Palgrave MacMillan) and is the editor of Gender Identity and Research Relationships in the Studies in Qualitative Methods book series (Emerald). Mike is co-convenor of the BSA Education Study Group and editorial board member for Sociological Research Online and the Journal of Boyhood Studies.
